chemical & biological sensing applications in a rational way [8]. a molecular simulation methodology that is capable of predicting the doping of eb by protonic acid is essential for the chemical sensing material research of the pani. if the method can be developed, it would provide a novel computational approach to surface stress sensors for detection of chemical and ... - sensing surface is activated for adsorption of chemical or biological molecules (figure 2). hence, the detected signal will represent only the molecular absorption that occurs on the sensing surface and not on the other. sensing/reference cantilevers are symmetrically positioned about the lens axis on the focal plane of mla2 and mla1. spectral sensing research for surface and air monitoring ... - developed for detection of chemical and biological species. a novel interferometric technique is utilized to measure the differential bending of sensing cantilever with respect to reference. presence of species is detected by measuring the differential surface stress associated with adsorption/absorption of chemical species on sensing cantilever. hyperspectral fluorescence remote sensing of landscape ... - synoptic remote sensing of chemical, biological and radiological materials or targets using hyperspectral reflectance alone falls far short of material detection specificity. to enhance specificity for target confirmation, a fusion between fluorescence and hyperspectral reflectance sensing should permit more specific identifications of threats. 2012 defense security+sensing -
